

When My Parent is Taken by ICE

ICE stands for Immigration and Customs Enforcement.

My parent had to go with someone from the government called ICE. ICE talks to people about where they live and their papers.

It is not my fault. I did nothing wrong. My parent did nothing wrong by loving me. ICE just has rules they have to follow.

I might feel sad, scared, or confused. I can talk to a trusted adult about how I feel.

Right now my parent is in a place where they have to stay and wait. They might talk to helpers or lawyers there.

While my parent is away, I might stay with people who care about me. They will help me feel safe and loved. My parent still loves me very much.

While I wait, I can do things I like and that help me feel calm. I can read a book, draw, or hug a stuffed animal.

One day I will see my parent again or hear from them. Until then, I can hold on to love and hope. Love keeps us connected, no matter what.
